THE SILVER MILESTONE

FOREWORD

BETWEEN the covers of the Silver Milestone we have tried to depict for you the past year with its pleasures and trials; successes and failures; friendships and enmities. As your journey through life adds new milestones to your experiences may this, the TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY MILESTONE, bring to your memory vivid recollections of Old Eastern in one thousand nine hundred thirty-two.

DEDICATION

TO those who conceived the idea;

To the Legislature of 1906 and to Governor J. C. W. Beckham who created this institution;

To the faithful regents who have unselfishly guarded her every interest;

To the presidents who have shaped her policies and guided her course;

To the teachers who have taught patiently, honestly, and wisely;

To the students who have sought wisdom and understanding within her walls;

To the alumni who have gone out to share with others the knowledge they have acquired,

We dedicate this MILESTONE

In commemoration of The Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the EASTERN KENTUCKY STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE.

H. L. DONOVAN
President

March 30, 1932

TO THE READERS OF THE MILESTONE:

Great educational institutions do not spring up as a mushroom in an evening. They develop slowly and at great price. Into them go both material and human resources, but the greater of these is the latter. Eastern has been fortunate in have had men and women of great devotion spend their lives promoting her growth. The college stands today for what she is because of the faith and loyalty of teachers, board members, and students. Her future will be safe so long as it is trusted to those who will also serve.

It is but natural that on our Twenty-fifth Anniversary, we should take an inventory and make a prophesy. With two buildings that had been given to the State, with a faculty of four or five teachers, and with a student body of less than one hundred, the school opened in January, 1907. Today, the college possesses fifteen buildings, a highly-trained faculty of seventy-five members and a student body of approximately 1400 in average daily attendance.

Eastern opened without the recognition of any of the accrediting agencies of the country, and many years elapsed before their approval could be secured. Finally, the institution was admitted to the American Association of Teachers Colleges and to the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States, and stands today without a single deficiency chalked against her by these associations. Eastern has been selected as one of the twenty-five outstanding teachers colleges of the United States "by the votes of a jury of specialists in higher education" because the institution "represents the better practices in education and in the preparation of teachers and offers work worthy of special study." At this time, the college is being surveyed by the staff of the National Survey of the Education of Teachers conducted by the Office of Education at Washington.

It is a far cry from the Eastern of 1907 to the Eastern of 1932. But the first quarter of a century in the life of a college is its most difficult period. It is safe to predict that the future holds in store greater developments during the next twenty-five years than the college has thus far known. Future progress will be in the direction of a more highly-selected student body, a better-educated faculty, higher standards of scholarship, more emphasis on culture, a better library, and greater laboratory facilities. These objectives will be attained by the sympathetic support of an interested alumni, such as is represented by the Class of '32.

Cordially yours,

H. L. Donovan
President

Goodbye to Eastern

There is always something a little sad about the closing of any period of history, be it national or personal. There is also something triumphant about it. There is something particularly sad yet triumphant about the closing of a college career, for the end of school days is also the end of a very definite period in the lives of young Americans. The day of dreaming and planning is over; the time to act, to assume responsibility is at hand. The collegiate boy has become a man, the co-ed a woman, and both are expected to go out into the world and begin that grim battle, known as Life.

Eastern's graduating class of 1932 is about to take this all important step, and it is with a feeling of reverence and regret that we leave the campus and halls of learning which have sheltered us these past four years.

Looking backward over those years we visualize great changes in our Alma Mater. There is no question that it has improved, and we each feel particularly fortunate to have been here when progress has been so evident. We have witnessed the beginning and completion of three magnificent structures—the Administration building, which was so fittingly dedicated to the late T. J. Coates, for many years executive head of Eastern; the Hiram Brock Auditorium; and the Charles A. Weaver Health Building.

The Class of '32 has the distinction of being the first to graduate under the four-year regime of President Donovan, for we were freshmen when our able new president assumed his official position here at Eastern.

Our personal history as a class would only be an enumeration of a great many well known and mediocre details that have been common to collegiate life the world over, for we have cried, danced, loved, studied, sung, and we have failed and succeeded much the same as have college students from time immemorial. If we have one claim to distinction it is that we have learned, in some measure at least, the meaning of that invaluable word, teamwork; for truly, a class has never graduated from Eastern that has felt more responsibility as individuls. We have sincerely endeavored to help, not hinder, our college scholastically, we have tried to work with our class president and we have supported our athletic teams which boasted several stars from among our ranks.

And so, as has been said before, it is with a feeling of reverence and gratitude that the Seniors of '32 say goodbye to Eastern Kentucky State Teachers College. It is with a feeling of sadness that we bid goodbye to school days, days dulled with study and brightened with sunlight, days permeated with despair and sprinkled with star-dust, and it is the sincerest wish of every '32 graduate that he bring only renown and prestige to the college that has rendered him such an invaluable service.

Class of '33

In 1829, Cassius M. Clay, a Richmond lad of nineteen years entered Yale University. One day he consulted a medium concerning his own Richmond, Kentucky, one hundred year hence. Gazing into the mysterious crystal, he became interested in a large group of boys and girls, all seemingly traveling in one direction, intent on the same object. Following the group, farther, he watched them pass through the portals of a great institution, Eastern Teachers College. Coming into those vast halls known only to the cultured and learned persons who had passed that way before, they became the stared-at, laughed-at, apparently insignificant class known as Freshmen. Their heads were adorned with ridiculous little red caps, and they responded to every beck and call of the older students. These little "red-caps" soon permeated every activity on the campus, social, dramatic, athletic, artistic or scholastic.

Turning to the year 1930, Clay saw this group returning to the institution entered for the first time the year before. Thy had discarded the red caps and in their stead assumed responsibilities and great masses of the mysterious, much sought, seldom found substance called knowledge. This year, as Sophomores, they followed the competent leadership of "Curt" Howard, Sam Routenberg, and Louise Rutledge, and made accomplishments seemingly impossible.

Then, in 1931, the class again returned, smaller, wiser, with some new members, but fundamentally the same. This was their big year. A political machine, something unknown in the year 1931, elected one "Josh" Cosby president, and chose as his aides Annie Laurie Forsythe, Betty Stewart, and Miss Mabel Pollitt. Immediately, under this wonderful leadership, they gave a delightful reception to a class known as Seniors. From the ranks of the class, now called Juniors, were chosen the most beautiful and most popular girls in the institution. Then they planned an elaborate affair called a "Prom" where everyone was to celebrate the crowning of one Virginia Moody, queen. But beautiful and popular girls were not all. Athletics, dramatics, art: every possible phase of each activity called on this class for personnel. Juniors were chosen as presidents of Little Theatre Club, Sigma Tau Pi, Home Economics Club, Sigma Lambda, and other groups.

Just at this point Mr. Clay was surprised to find himself rudely lifted from his seat by a big, rough chap who said, "Time for all Freshmen to be studying, sonny!"

This is station S-O-P-H-S broadcasting from Eastern Teachers College, located at Richmond, Kentucky. You will be instructively entertained by the Class Historian for the next few minutes.

In opening it can be said that a true champion's worth is not determined by the achievement of one year, but rather by the series of successes he has achieved over a period of longer duration. So it is with the Sophomore Class, they did not quit their salutary ways after graduating from the Freshman ranks, but climbed to greater heights of serviceability on the Campus during the succeeding year.

They were found in every educational and recreational organization on the campus. The Glee Club and Madrigal Club were elevated to greater heights, the Little Theatre Club initiated some Sophomores into the intricate art of acting and then produced a play which was a sparkling success. The Band and Orchestra consisted in most part of Sophomores. The "Y's" and other groups were likewise benefited by their presence. Likewise they distinguished themselves in the class room by setting a high standard for the rest of the student body to attain.

While being foremost in the class room, they were far from the hindermost in athletics. They furnished over half of the letter men on the football squad, and an alternate regular quintet which proved its calibre in every contest on the basketball court.

These successes are largely due to Dr. T. E. Herndon, sponsor of the Sophomore Class, and the class officers, who have served so efficiently during the year.

Throughout the rest of their college career, there is assurance that the Sophomores will continue to maintain and set standards that will bring a feeling of pride to every student and alumnus of Eastern.

Station S-O-P-H-S will now sign off.

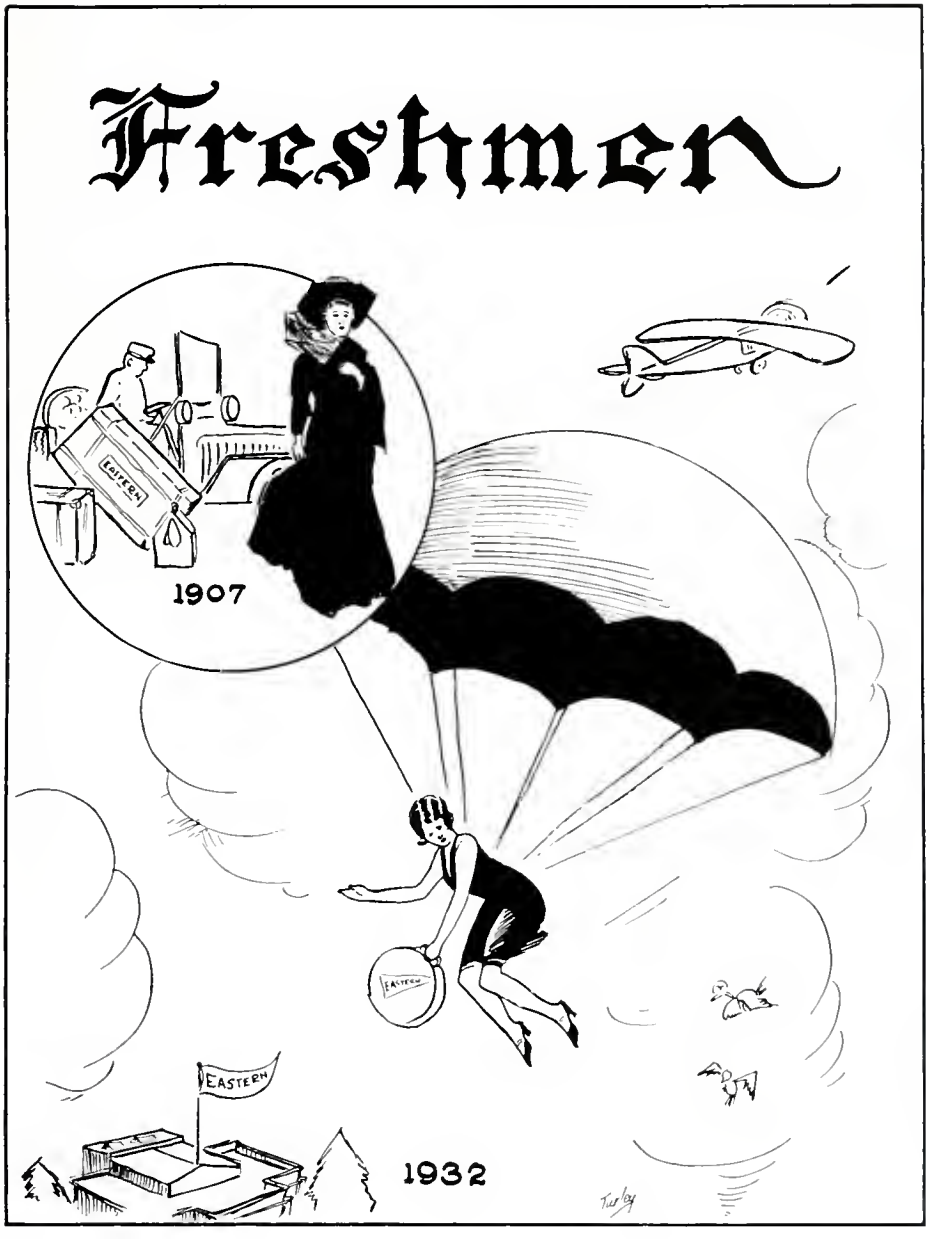
The Boonesboro Bridge

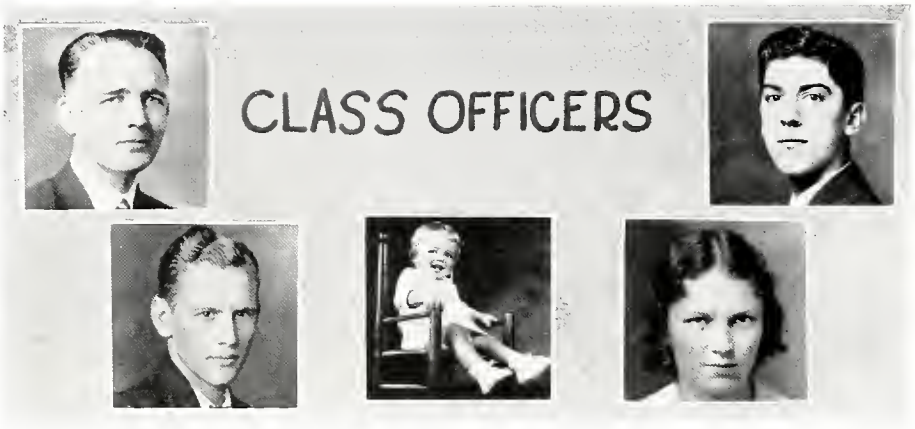
The opening of the new bridge last November at Boonesboro marks the end of an epoch in Kentucky history.

The bridge is erected near the sit of old Fort Boonesboro which was established by Boone and his companions who were sent to this section by the Henderson Land Company and which was the first fortified settlement west of the Allegheney Mountains.

For over a hundred years a small, crude "hand" ferry, the first ever in Kentucky, had carried passengers and conveyances across the Kentucky River, and this same means was used until it was recently supplanted by the magnificent new bridge which was constructed by the State Highway Department under the supervision of the Honorable Ben Johnson. It was constructed at a cost of over a quarter of a million dollars.

Freshmen





Class of '35

On September 18, 1931, four hundred and fifteen high school graduates, the pride of their home towns, came to Eastern to begin that great adventure known as "College Life." We were the average group, having the normal curve, (used advisedly, after consulting notes on Educational Psychology.)

After all the trials of getting registered, and housed, together with getting used to the change in daily schedule, a new menace came into our heretofore innocent and placid lives, namely, the "Mistik Six." Suffice it to say that, after various alterations, we gladly wore the crimson caps and endured other indignities.

Gradually our timidity and self-consciousness, early Freshmen characteristics left us, and we began to participate in the many extra-curricular activities. Now there is hardly a club on the Campus which does not have a Freshman on its membership list. As for sports, you could depend on us to put out a first rate team in all the fields.

At the first opportunity, with Dr. Cuff, our class sponsor presiding, we held our election for the class officers. Jack Allen of Prestonburg was elected president; Dorothy Tyng of Richmond, vice-president; and Ed Hill of Pineville, secretary-treasurer. At the same time an executive cabinet to assist the officers in the class administration was elected. This cabinet was made up of Lloyd Dykes, Betty Chenault, Minor Clark, Clay Ritchie, Vivian Buckshorn, Jeanette Hunter, George Miller and James Isaacs.

At the beginning of the second semester our ranks were nearly doubled, both by the old Freshmen and the new students coming in.

Looking ahead, we find that we shall be Sophomores next year, Juniors the third year, and so forth and maybe we shall all be presidents someday, too!

The 1931 football squad played much better ball than the scores show. Although losing most of their games, the Maroons showed better team work, and put up a better fight than the Eastern squad has displayed for several years.

The team, led by Captain Kenneth Canfield, opened the season with a brilliant victory over Sue Bennett. After being defeated by two Ohio teams, the Maroons clashed with the University of Louisville. The Maroons outplayed the Cardinals throughout the game, but due to bad breaks, the opponents pushed over two touchdowns that they did not earn. The opponents, however, used two ineligible men and forefeited the game to Eastern by a score of 2 to 0.

The Maroons were required to take the short end of several close scores until they met Morehead with whom they played a scoreless tie.

The prospect for a winning football team at Eastern is becoming brighter each year. With some good material being added from this year's freshmen squad, the Hughesmen are expected to make a much better showing next season.

Freshmen Football

Eastern has maintained a freshmen team only four years. The Little Maroons of 1931 like to boast of the fact that they went through the season undefeated. This is an honor that the previous freshmen teams cannot claim. Almost any afternoon last fall one could see the Little Maroons dashing madly to get out on the old gridiron. What clashing and dashing there was after they got out there. These efforts were, beyond all doubts, not in vain. Some might call it grit, others might say it was luck, but whatever you choose to call it, real work must have played its part in making for a successful season.

This was the second year for "Al" Portwood to serve as guide for the Little Maroons. "Listen folks", let's give him a glad hand as well as the yearlings for he was a real stimulus for them.

The Little Maroons opened their season by clashing with the much heavier team representing the freshmen of Georgetown. When the gun fired at the end of the battle, neither side had been able to take the ball over the goal line. In the next fray the Little Maroons swamped the University of Louisville Freshmen 20 to 0. Then, after defeating the Blue Devils of Lexington, the Little Maroons marched out on the gridiron to meet the reserves of the University of Kentucky freshmen squad. This was the most thrilling and the hardest fought game of the season. When the final period ended and the Kittens got their eyes open, they were disappointd to find themselves at the short end of a 6 to 8 score. If these boys are back on the war path next fall, some of the college teams in Kentucky had better put on their armor for they will be hard to handle.

Varsity Basketball

The 1931-32 basketball season was a very satisfactory one for the varsity team. In addition to the three pre-holiday games played with one independent and two Ohio college teams, the varsity schedule included sixteen games with Kentucky college teams. The Maroons were able to take twelve of this number. Of the four games lost, three were dropped by margins of three points or less.

In the annual Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Association tournament at Winchester which climaxed the season's work, the Maroons were able to go to the finals over Centre and Berea. The final game of the tournament was all that a championship game should be. It was fought out by the squads from two state teachers' colleges—Eastern and Western. At no time before the final five minutes of play, did either team have more than a two-point advantage, the lead changing nine times during the contest. With only five minutes to play, Western gained the lead and began freezing the ball, with the result that they were able to draw the Maroons out from under their goal and to score enough points to win the contest 36-27.

Eastern supported her team loyally, and is justly proud of the runner-up trophy, the first any Eastern basketball squad ever won. She is equally proud of the first all-tournament award to come to an Eastern man: Zelda Hale was chosen as guard on the all-state team.

Immediately following the state tournament the squad left for Jackson, Mississippi to participate in the Southern Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association tournament. They received their invitation on the basis of their high standing for the season. At Jackson they were defeated 46-32 by the strong team from Millsaps College.

This year closed the college basketball careers of six seniors, five of whom—Zelda Hale, Herman Hale, Lawrence Hale, Ben Adams, and Captain Bill Melton, have played together for four consecutive years. Eastern has had good individual basketball players before these men entered school, but this is the first time she has ever had a squad that was unbroken during its entire career by with-drawals or ineligibility. Hugh Spurlock, the other senior member, has played three years with the squad. Eastern has a sincere pride in, and owes a real debt of gratitude to these men who have done so much to put this school in the fore-ground in the inter-collegiate basketball field. During the three years that this team has played varsity basketball, they have been invited to the southern tournament.

The best result of their work here is evidenced in the excellent basketball material found in the other eight members of the squad, and in the very bright prospects for the basketball season of the coming year.

Freshmen Basketball

Coach Portwood of the freshmen basketball squad, had a larger number of men out for the team this year than in previous years. As a result he used more men than he has in other years.

The freshmen schedule consisted of fifteen games with the yearlings of other Kentucky colleges, and in addition with one high school team.

The Little Maroons were able to take the measure of all their opponents, with the exception of the Kittens from the University of Kentucky and the first-year men from Western. They lost all of their games to these two squads, although one of the games with Western was taken by only one point.

Probably the most exciting game of the season was the close return game with Berea, played at Berea. The Little Maroons were victorious, but they all but gave their supporters heart failure before they emerged with a one-point advantage.

Several of the Little Maroons will be rushing some of the members of the varsity squad for their positions in the coming season. Supporters of these youngsters have every confidence that they will see their favorites in varsity basketball tilts in the coming three years.

McGaughey and the Photographs!

IT is understood that the success of an annual largely depends upon the quality of its photographs. The Milestone staff thoroughly realized this fact when it selected the McGaughey Studio, Richmond, Kentucky, as the official photographer for the 1932 Milestone.

There were no delays whatsoever in getting out the prints. All through the season the service was courteous, flawless; no need for correction. There were no mistakes; nothing more in the way of service was possible.

We unconditionally recommend McGaughey to future staffs of the Milestone.

Garland Jett says that Eastern has some of the most bias girls that he has ever dated. He says that even on leap-year dates they are always saying, "buy us this and buy us that".

George Carrol's social advisor has told him that his greatest trouble is that he burns his girls up talking about "old flames."

Lucy Mitchell told "Willie" Wilson that if he was where he belonged every one would be cra y about him. The trick in it is she consigned him to the asylum.

"Come to Eastern, the Friendly College"

A Freshman has raised the question as to whether chapel speakers should put more fire into their speeches, or more of their speeches into the fire.

The greatest difference be ween the man of today and the ancient cave man is the kind of club that they use on their wives. When trouble arose the cave man used a real club, and the modern man used the Elks Club the Lion's Club, or an ordinary night club.

William Jennings Jackson has written some poetry in which he claims to have put his whole mind. Local authorities agree that it is blank verse.

The "bright idea" prize for 1932 goes to William Rober Turpin (The Heavy), who suggests that all of the students and some of the faculty wear a pair of colored glasses during chapel exercises so that snoozing will not be so easily detected.

From a Friend

PRACTICAL GRAMMAR

There was a co-ed, her name was Sis;
Her teacher called on her to parse the word kiss.
For a short while there was not a sound,
Then she said that the word was a noun.
Here her brain began to function
And she decided that it was a conjunction.
It was very plain in her mind
That this thing was never declined.
Then she smiled at a boy named Hopper,
And said, the word was more common than proper.
To use it in the singular would be cruel
Because it should always be used in the plural.
There is one thing more you see
And that is, it agrees with me.
